THERE'S FATHER'S FRIEND.

By VIRGINIA F. TOWNSEND.

It is agreeable to the great majority of the white boys of the North, you and which should have the largest portion of the time of boys and girls, everything being, you see, as it is.

The street was crowded with people, and the shops were filled with customers. It was a fine day, and there was a pleasant breeze blowing.

MARRIED IN JEST;

THE HEIRESS OF FERNLEY.

By MRS. HELEN CORNER PARKER.

CHAPTER III.

AN UNEXPECTED VISIT.

It was a bright and sunny day, and the sun was shining down upon the happy little village of Fernley, where the Heiress of Fernley was enjoying a visit from her cousin, Lord Ferrers. Lord Ferrers was a handsome young man, with a fine figure, and a cheerful and genial face, and he was just the sort of companion that the Heiress of Fernley could not imagine a happier one. He had come to pay her a long-expected visit, and she had been waiting for him with the greatest delight. She had been thinking of him all the morning, and her heart was full of joy as she looked out of the window and saw him coming up the lane.

THE TALE OF THE WISE.

There are those who believe in the power of Fate, and who think that every event in life is controlled and governed by the will of some unseen force. Among such people, the Heiress of Fernley was no exception. She had always been a believer in the theory of Fate, and she was now determined to put her belief to the test. She was going to marry Lord Ferrers, and she was going to do it in spite of all the warnings of those who doubted her decision.

THE POWER OF LOVE.

Love is the greatest force in the world. It is the power that can conquer all obstacles, and it is the power that can change the course of life. The Heiress of Fernley knew this well, and she was determined to use her strength for the benefit of others. She was going to marry Lord Ferrers, and she was going to do it in spite of all the warnings of those who doubted her decision.

THE CHANCE OF MIRACLES.

It was a beautiful summer day, and the sun was shining down upon the happy little village of Fernley, where the Heiress of Fernley was enjoying a visit from her cousin, Lord Ferrers. Lord Ferrers was a handsome young man, with a fine figure, and a cheerful and genial face, and he was just the sort of companion that the Heiress of Fernley could not imagine a happier one. He had come to pay her a long-expected visit, and she had been waiting for him with the greatest delight. She had been thinking of him all the morning, and her heart was full of joy as she looked out of the window and saw him coming up the lane.

THE VICARIOUS SPOUSE.

MOTHERS IN THE SENATE.

We the women have taken hold and shall not let go. We are determined that the man shall not have his own way, if we can help it. We are doing everything possible to prevent the passage of the bill for the man's relief, and we shall continue to work until the bill is defeated. We are determined to stand by our rights, and not to be trampled on by the man. We are determined to have our rights, and we shall not be屈服

MARY HOLT'S ENGAGEMENT.

BY A THRIFTY ONE.

And I am very happy. I can hardly believe it myself. I have been so long in the dark about the matter, that I hardly knew what to do. But I have been very happy, ever since I have known that Mary is to be engaged. I have been very happy, ever since I have known that Mary is to be engaged.
